What Does This Generally Mean?

What's the difference between same-day rebooking and same-day standby on Alaska generally means rebooking confirms a new specific seat while standby places you on a waitlist for one on your particular preferred flight.

(1) REBOOKING CONFIRMS A NEW SEAT: this generally represents the more certain specific of the two options.

(2) STANDBY PLACES YOU ON A WAITLIST: your particular standby request generally carries this less certain specific outcome.

(3) CONFIRM FOR YOUR SPECIFIC SITUATION: verify what applies to your particular preference.

REBOOKING CONFIRMS A NEW SEAT: this generally represents the more certain specific of the two options.

Why Does This Distinction Matter?

What this generally means generally is these two options carry different specific levels of certainty, since your particular priorities around guaranteed seating generally should guide which option you request.

(1) DIFFERENT SPECIFIC LEVELS OF CERTAINTY: this generally represents the key distinction between these two options.

(2) SHOULD GUIDE YOUR REQUEST: your particular priorities generally determine which approach fits best.

Example — a traveler weighing their options asks about both same-day rebooking and standby, choosing rebooking for the added specific certainty of a confirmed seat on their particular new flight.

DIFFERENT SPECIFIC LEVELS OF CERTAINTY: this generally represents the key distinction between these two options.

How Do You Choose Your Specific Option?

Step 1. Call +1-833-567-5864 to discuss both options.

Step 2. Confirm availability for confirmed rebooking first.

Step 3. Ask about standby if rebooking isn't available.

Step 4. Confirm the resulting choice that fits your priorities.

Step 5. Proceed with whichever option you select.

CALL TO DISCUSS BOTH OPTIONS: confirming rebooking availability first before considering standby as an alternative.

What Should You Do If Both Options Are Limited?

Step 1. Confirm the resulting best available choice.

Step 2. Ask about later same-day flight options too.

Step 3. Call +1-833-567-5864 to discuss your specific situation.

Step 4. Weigh all available alternatives.

Step 5. Proceed with whichever solution fits your needs.

CONFIRM THE RESULTING BEST AVAILABLE CHOICE: if both rebooking and standby options are limited for your preferred flight.
